

Shorter publication time

EDITORIAL

---

Being an attractive journal for researchers and clinicians to publish in, there are also some disadvantages with too many manuscripts reaching us. Three years ago it sometimes took 24–30 months from the acceptance of an original article to printed publication in our journal. This was far from satisfactory and we decided to actively work with our processes aiming at shortening the publishing time, gave priority to original articles and increased the size of our journal. We have today considerably shortened the backlog and now enjoy very short publication times. The majority of the articles in this issue are in print today after having been accepted 5–8 months ago. I want to express my thanks to all hard-working colleagues of the journal who made this quality transformation possible for the benefit of our researchers, clinicians and readers of our journal. Today Dental Traumatology is even more attractive to publish in.

Lars Andersson

Editor in Chief

e-mail: lars.andersson@hsc.edu.kw

This document is a scanned copy of a printed document. No warranty is given about the accuracy of the copy. Users should refer to the original published version of the material.